

of life and raking up profit for retailers here isn't the way forward. We plant a tree for every door we make and we would like to do more. John would like to create a London arboretum. It is frustrating that there isn't more we could do with our wood waste. In Sweden sawdust is turned into wood pellets which in turn are used to heat hospitals and schools. We would so love to be part of a scheme that helps in that way or with schools being able to use our off-cuts for woodwork but the bureaucracy and health and safety issues are really time-consuming.'

Up in the workshop and showroom in Clapham they have employees that have been there 17 years, young lads who want to see if carpentry is their thing alongside bankers who have decided they hate their day job and want to make things with their hands. Go and visit - you may have a rather unexpected day!
